

Aligning Your Teaching to the Common Core Just Got Easier.

100 Text Dependent Question Stems and Samples...Print and Go! Your K-12 Informational and Narrative Text Resource

Dear Common Core Implementer,

I don't know about you, but I'm finding that there's TOO MUCH information on what to do, what to use and how to assess it with the Common Core Standards. It's overwhelming!

But if you know me, you know that I'm always looking for ways to help cut through the mire and muck of those overly complicated processes in education – it just doesn't have to be confusing! This surely doesn't mean that I'm "dumbing it down" or over-simplifying, it just means that I'm highly motivated by how we get information and practices, like the Common Core, into the hands of teachers. And, in turn, in the hands of kids.

I've seen that teachers are really excited about the idea that they can find a resource and literally use it tomorrow in their classrooms. And that's why we created this "grab and go" guide for you.

Print it. And go use it with students tomorrow.

The research on the Common Core and the practices behind it strongly support that text dependent questions and questioning techniques are central to students deeply reading, understanding, discussing and writing about highly complex text. By posing text-dependent questions, you require students to:

- Root their responses in the text they're reading
- Rely upon their 'close reading' skills in their responses
- Move beyond simple recall, to deep analysis of text
- Continually refer to what they've read, not just background or outside sources
- Read and manage increasingly difficult pieces of text

Make no mistake: These aren't sissy kind of questions! And using them will require you to do some prep to adjust these frames for the text you're using, but the results will knock your socks off!

I believe that our success with the Common Core will come one step at a time...and this is a very important start!

Here's to fantastic teaching and tons of learning – thank you so much for purchasing this resource!
